

I recently read that the FAA has now issued a proposed ruling to implement that airlines file monthly reports on incidents involving animals. First, I want to thank the agency to acknowledge that there is a problem and I urge them to pass the rule quickly.

If I understand correctly, this rule only applies to pets to U.S. families. I believe that the term "animal" should be broadened to include all animals. It shouldn't matter if it is a pet in a home or an animal going to a zoo, etc. All animals should be respected and given the same treatment as humans on an airline.

Thank you for your time,
Kathryn Trussell
